

Why Create an End-of-Life Plan Now?

Are you too busy living to think about dying? Happily, most of us are. We are so busy planning and enjoying our lives that it seems awkward to plan for our death. Being prepared for End-of-Life, however, may make all the difference to your loved ones when the inevitable occurs. Planning ahead is the key to making a graceful transition.

What is End-of-Life Management?

End-of-Life Management encompasses all the essential End-of-Life issues, from choosing healthcare preferences and funeral service options to managing your legal and financial matters. End-of-Life Management is an important, inevitable milestone that requires research, careful consideration, decisions and most importantly, a plan.

What is End-of-Life Planning?

End-of-Life planning is the process of creating a personal plan that identifies your wishes for your final healthcare and comfort needs, funeral services and financial and personal assets.

Your plan will include an actionable set of documents that may be shared with your family, guardians, service providers and trusted advisors who will honor and carry out your final wishes.

Why Plan Ahead?

End-of-Life planning provides you with peace of mind. By planning, you can organize your final matters and make careful decisions to ensure that your wishes will be followed. Other benefits include:

- Personal control
Your End-of-Life plan allows you to choose preferences for final care and comfort procedures, funeral services, to whom you will leave your assets and how you want to be remembered.

- Better decisions
Your End-of-Life plan relieves your loved ones from having to make complicated decisions during an emotional and stressful time in their lives.
- Financial savings
Your End-of-Life plan may reduce overspending that can occur when loved ones are experiencing grief and have to make immediate decisions.
- Time
End-of-Life planning involves consideration of many options. From researching and making decisions to documenting and communicating your final wishes, the process is best managed with time.

Wherever you are in your life, whether you are starting your career or changing jobs, starting a family or retiring, now is a good time to start considering your End-of-Life plan. Planning for yourself or for your aging loved ones is an important and invaluable gift. The real question when considering End-of-Life planning is: why not plan ahead?

How Can I Best Manage End-of-Life Planning?

Passare has easy-to-understand “How-to” Guides that cover important End-of-Life topics like creating a will, choosing an executor, obtaining life insurance, managing estate planning, storing important documents, managing digital assets and planning a funeral.

For more information on creating an actionable End-of-Life plan, go to www.passare.com. Passare helps you learn about this process and give you control over one of life’s most important passages. So please don’t wait. Take the steps now to learn and plan. We promise it will be time well spent.